Elizabeth Linder serves as Facebook's Politics & Government Specialist for the Europe, Middle East and Africa region. She advises representatives, government agencies, public administrations, and think tanks on the intersection of Facebook and 21st-century governance. She works closely with her constituents identify how Facebook fits into the global demand for more transparency and openness in the public sector, and examine societal trends that profoundly influence the ways in which the public interacts with its leaders. She has built Facebook's EMEA Politics & Government Program from the ground up, working with more than twenty-seven countries at the head-of-state, national, and local levels since January 2011. A California native, she joined Facebook from the company's headquarters in 2008. Prior to Facebook, she specialized in U.S. politics and education at YouTube as part of Google's Global Communications & Public Affairs team. She currently resides in London.
